My photography journey began on an actual travel journey at the age of nine, on my first international adventure, through Spain and Morocco. For the better part of two months I captured day after day of new sights and experiences through a series of disposable cameras and unsurprisingly fell in love with both travel and photography at once. Fast forward twenty years and not much has changed: whenever I'm lucky to find myself in a new province, country or continent, my camera is always in hand and whether I'm on assignment or on vacation, photos are always my souvenir of choice.
